THE UNITED STATES, 150 YEARS YOUNG, TURNS BACK PAGES OF HISTORY WITH PRIDE

THOMAS JEFFERSON
The author of the Declaration of Independence.

JEFFERSON'S SCHOOL A SHRINE FOR MANY
The little school near Richmond, Va., where Thomas Jefferson, from 1748 to 1752, studied his "A. B. C.'s" is a shrine for thousands. On the building is a tablet recording the fact. (L. N. R.)

AN EVENT THAT MADE HISTORY
The above, the signing of the Declaration of Independence, thrills all Americans. Signers for Massachusetts were John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Robert Treat Paine and Elbridge Gerry.

SALUTE OLD GLORY
An abundant display of Old Glory throughout the land is the order for Monday, our natal day.

MARINES GUARD LIBERTY BELL
A squad of marines have been assigned to guard the Liberty Bell during the Sesqui-centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. Two marines are on duty at the treasured relic.

MRS. WOOD MAY BE IN SOUTH

To see if he can identify it as belonging to his wife. A telephone conversation of the fact was given him, but he said he did not believe it talked with any but in his wife's possession. He asked that it be forwarded him.

Extreme reluctance is being shown by Dr. Woods. He appears to be extremely nervous, and is begged reporters not to ask to see him.

It is known, however, that Dr. Woods' nephew, Professor Arthur Ochs Saxe of Wellesley College, Harvard, is at his summer home at York Harbor, Me., and it is possible that Mrs. Woods may have paid him a flying visit without notifying her husband. Dr. Woods has said he did not know his wife was in Maine.

It is reported that Mrs. Woods had been recently ill for more than a year.

Only a few of the intimates of Dr. Woods knew that he was married. He came to Harvard from New Orleans twenty years ago. Dr. LaRue, formerly a professor at Harvard, said that Mrs. Woods had been an invalid for years and was unable to stand the northern climate. For this reason, he said, he had not understood how Mrs. Woods would be in Portland. He added as far as he knew there was little to the report, the missing woman was Mrs. Woods.

ONLY STATEMENT
The only statement furnished by Dr. Woods was that the facts as published in the case were all wrong.

The woman believed to have been Mrs. Woods boarded the Cal-Val Austin at Portland the night of June 25. Her baggage and ticket were found in her apartment, but officers of the ship were positive the woman did not leave the boat at New York. The woman is believed to have gone overboard. The Cal-Val Austin was passing Eastern Point, Gloucester.

Commander Carl C. von Dachsen of the Coast Guard station at Gloucester has been notified to keep a close watch for the body of this woman. The man given the name of the commander was that of Mrs. Woods.

The junior of the Woods apartment in Cambridge (Daniel M. Woods) said, said Mrs. Woods had been in Cambridge a year ago and went to New Orleans last fall. He said Professor Woods had visited her in New Orleans.

SOCIETY FOR CARE OF GIRLS OPENS CAMPAIGN
July 3 has been announced by the board of directors of the Boston Society for the Care of Girls, No. 24 Mt. Vernon street, as the opening day of the annual "Blossom a Friend to Girls" Week. From July 3 to 17 this organization will open a campaign in an endeavor to make new friends for its work. The society will ask people in Boston and vicinity to contribute the sum of one or more dollars.

The Boston Society for the Care of Girls was founded in 1861 and for more than 125 years has been rendering a valuable service to girls in Boston and vicinity.

200 YOUNG JUDEANS WILL ENJOY OUTING
Two hundred members of the various Young Judean clubs in Greater Boston will hold an outing at Nahant Park, Wellesley, tomorrow. The picnicers, aged ten to twenty, will be transported to cruise from the Mt. Vernon street Young Men's Hebrew Association. The picnic committee is composed of Miriam Kopolovsky, Charles Promnitz, Pansy Hahner, Sara Cooperstock, Louis S. Sieve and Victor Agrunt.

JOYCE HAWLEY HAS QUIT LIFE IN THE TUB
Chicago, July 3.—Joyce Hawley, who bathed in "cruiser" at Bath Carrol's famous party, is leaving New York. In a letter read by her parents here today, she said: "I am tired of the life of a socialite and I want to get away to a quiet spot. I am not going to New York any more. I am leaving with a theatrical company, where I'll lead a useful life."

THIS NEW 'WATCH' IS A KNOCK-OUT

HOW THE HOLDUP MAN IS SHOCKED
Newest device for self-protection in an electrical disk, similar to a wrist watch, which is capable of a current of 10,000 volts. A wire runs from the wrist to a battery in the pocket. The intended victim gently strokes the inventor, who is rendered unconscious. In the picture the burglar is showing how it works. (L. N. R.)

DYNAMITE BETWEEN TEETH AND A MATCH—HE DIED

London, July 3 (U.N.R.)—Giovanni Pagano, a mine foreman, committed suicide today in Piedmont, Italy, by touching off a stick of dynamite which he held between his teeth, according to a Central News dispatch from Milan. Ten others were seriously injured in the explosion, and the restaurant in which the tragedy occurred was completely destroyed.

Pagano entered with the dynamite procured from his mother. Striking a match, he set fire to the fuse. Pagano's head was found four yards from the scene of the explosion, and the restaurant in which the tragedy occurred was completely destroyed.

Spider's Bite Fatal
Millbrook, N. Y., July 3.—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Baisie died after having been bitten by a spider.

1 DEAD, 2 HURT, IN ASYLUM FIRE

Five United States destroyers sailed from the Boston Navy Yard at noon today, having on board 23 officers and 260 men, comprising the 1st fleet, Naval Reserve, composed of Greater Boston young men, for their annual 15 days training cruise.

The reserves left on the Destroyers Childs, Smith Thompson, Overbay and J. K. Paulding and King. A cruise along the Atlantic coast is the program for tomorrow and Monday, after which the destroyers will join the scouting fleet for maneuvers off Narragansett Bay and Long Island. This is the first time that so many destroyers have been attempted with naval reserves.

The trip from the Navy Yard to Cape Ann and then to sea in the vicinity of Gardner's Bay, Long Island, will afford officers and men an opportunity to study battle formations, night torpedo attacks, gun drills and to take part in collision, man-overboard and other emergency drills.

The five destroyers from this port will be joined by other destroyers carrying reserves from various districts of the Atlantic coast, making it the first grand mobilization of the Naval Reserves in this season.

DAWES DUE IN BOSTON SUNDAY, MAINE BOUND
Washington, July 3.—Vice-President Dawes will leave for Boston tonight on the Federal express. Mrs. Dawes, who is coming on from Chicago, will meet him there Sunday morning, and they will continue tonight to Kennebunk, Me., to be the guests of Kenneth L. Roberts.

Mr. Dawes will be in Salem next Wednesday as the guest of the city for the occasion of the governor's celebration. He plans then to return to his home at Evanston, Ill., for a quiet vacation.

COUPLE OWES $130,000, WITH ASSETS OF $300
Liabilities in excess of $130,000, with assets of only $300, were listed today by Harold W. Hodge and his wife of Springfield in a voluntary bankruptcy petition filed in Federal District Court. The Hodge Street Trust Company of Boston was named as the sole creditor on two promissory notes. Hodge also alleged that the debt was incurred by him in guaranteeing a contract between the New England Guaranty Corporation and the United Chalk Hardware Company and that he received nothing himself.

POWERFUL NEW LIGHT GUARDS BAKERS ISLAND
A new light of modern type has been installed at Bakers Island to replace the two fixed white lights in operation there for years.

Of 11,000 candle power, the new light placed under the supervision of Captain George E. Eaton, superintendent of the Light House District, showed red and white and will flash its warning every fifteen seconds. It has been placed in the southeast tower in place of one of the former lights.

VAL-STEP NEWEST THING IN DANCING
New York, July 3 (A.P.)—The Valstep today entered American social life as the approved new dance of the year. It was submitted to the 15th annual convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing by Dorothy Norman Choppe of Jersey City.

JACKSON WON'T SAY HE'LL RUN

James Jackson of Westwood, former State treasurer and mentioned as a candidate for Governor in opposition to the reelection of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, refused today actually to announce himself as a candidate for the gubernatorial office.

He said: "I am not convinced that I am fit to be a candidate."

His friends, however, Mr. Jackson says have urged him to be a candidate. Asked if in the event that he should run he would adopt a wet policy, he said: "I was not asked that question before and my reply was that I would run as anti to the Anti-Saloon League."

"I have no use for that crowd and so a matter of fact I am anti any 'filing anti'."

Questioned as to whether he was well in the sense that he appeared to be, Mr. Jackson replied: "If you would call that being well, then yes, I am well. I consider the methods of that organization in participating in political campaigns a most pernicious influence. I have had experience with the kind of evil surroundings which that organization is injecting into our political life."

MAN BURIED TO NECK IN SAND IS DUG OUT ALIVE
Providence, July 3 (A.P.)—John Paulino, 55, was buried to his neck in sand, 15 feet below the surface of the ground when the earth caved in while he was working in a sewer trench here today. It took scores of workmen, poles and firmness, and a half hour to extricate him alive. A rope was eventually tied around his chest, while a priest hovered about the side of the hole ready to administer the last rites of the church if necessary.

ENGLISH MAYOR AMAZED BY U. S.

Amazed by the rush of life in American cities, Mayor Percy J. A'Court of Weymouth, England, accompanied by three fellow townsmen, arrived in Boston today and plunged into a long program of activities in connection with the sesqui-centennial celebration of the founding of Weymouth, Mass.

"Driving through New York and Boston in a motor car escorted by policemen, on motorcycles, I felt as if I was losing the loop," said the visiting Mayor while breakfasting at the Harvard Club. "It was quite thrilling."

BEWILDERED BY HEIGHTS.

"The tall buildings impressed me and the height at which we had our rooms, on the nineteenth floor of a hotel, bewildered me completely. Your automobile traffic amazes me but it is well handled."

Weymouth, England, he described as a chiefly residential city with no squares but with two breweries. The officials accompanying Mayor A'Court are City Clerk Percy Smeaton, and City Councilmen Thomas Moore and William J. Peters.

Inspection of the Edison plant at Weymouth and a large shoe factory there occupied the afternoon and later the visitors were to join in the American Legion Field Day at East Weymouth. Special services will be held in several Weymouth churches tomorrow and the visiting delegation will be expected to attend them all.

TO CALL ON FULLER.

Following the pageantry on Monday, which will include a reproduction of the Battle of Gravelle Island, the Englishmen will visit Plymouth on Tuesday, call on Governor Fuller at the State House on Wednesday, be guests of the Worcester Historical Society on Thursday, and depart later for a visit to Canada and several days en route New York.

FIRST TUB AIR MAIL.

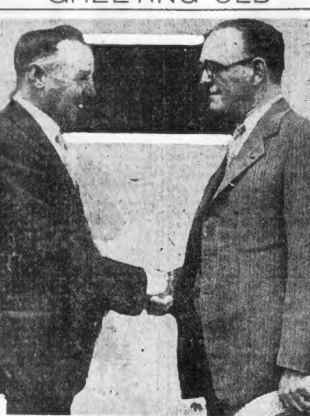

MOVIES ON SCREEN

Motion pictures of the first air mail plane to arrive at the East Boston Airport and the ceremonies held in connection with the opening of the mail-bus service between Boston and New York are being shown in all the leading theatres of the city.

The Finding was (one by Nick Sears of the International Newsweek Corporation and includes "Notes" of Governor Fuller and Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, helping mail clerks in carrying mail pouches to the planes, a salutary salute as the planes departed on their return trip, fire boats in the harbor and many other scenes.

Governor Trumbull, who returned in an escort plane, had packed away the International reel pictures to the laboratories where prints were made. These were rushed to Boston by special messenger in time for yesterday's performance.

NEW WEYMOUTH IS GREETING OLD

FROM OVER SEAS
Mayor A'Court of Weymouth, Eng., is here for the sesqui-centennial of Weymouth, Mass. Tall buildings and auto traffic of New York most impressed him. He is seen shaking hands with the chairman of the Weymouth Board of Selectmen in the picture.

CONGRESS ENDS SESSION

Washington, July 3 (A.P.)—Senator George Norris, Republican insurgent from Nebraska, who on many occasions has found himself at odds with the Coolidge administration, resigned today as chairman of the Senate agriculture committee.

As soon as it met the Senate accepted the resignation without debate.

The retirement of Norris leaves as the ranking Republican on the committee another Senator who has disagreed with the President on farm relief legislation—McNary of Oregon, author of the McNary farm equalization fee bill, voted down by six votes with the help of administration Senators.

QUITS AT 3 P. M.

Congress closed 3 p. m. today as the hour of final adjournment for the summer.

A House resolution setting the time for debating was adopted by the Senate without a record vote. Leaving behind a record of many things done, as well as things undone, its members are able to point to passage of a revenue bill, still made to have eased the nation's tax burden by $100,000,000, to approval by the Senate of a resolution providing for American adherence to the world court protocol, to ratification of a number of war debt settlements, chief among them that with Italy, and to enactment of a measure designed to promote peace in the railroad industry.

FARM RELIEF.

As for farm relief, which stirred up strife during most of the session, only one proposal, a co-operative marketing bill sponsored by the administration, reached the White House. Along with a number of relief measures, the Senate passed a number of bills for the most part vetoed by the House, and the House and Senate turned down the corn belt plan with its equalization fee feature.

Prohibition looked into debate in both Houses at frequent intervals, but administration bills to tighten the Volstead law for the most part went by the boards along with modification proposals.

Measures failing of action retain their place on the calendar for the December session. Some of them are the rivers and harbors bill and the Federal Reserve bill.

OTHERS LEFT OVER.

Others are the French debt settlement, already approved by the House, which administration leaders intend to press to a vote before next March 4, and the Lausanne treaty with Turkey, which the Senate agreed to take up the first day of the December session.

Prior to that, the Senate will convene on November 16 to sit as a trial court on the charges of impeachment brought against Federal Judge Griffith of the Eastern Illinois District by the House.

One of the most important issues with which the Congress is expected to wrestle again during the December session is the proposed Colorado river development, while the feasibility of House and Senate leaders to get together on a permanent program for radio control also makes it appear certain that this problem again will be in the forefront.

LAST RITES FOR FIRE HERO

Mayor Nichols and Boston firemen today paid final tribute to Michael Travers, fire hero of 22nd St., who succumbed to death while fighting a blaze at No. 71 Bedford street. Funeral services were held at St. Andrew's church, Forest Hills. The Rev. Patrick J. Dwyer, pastor of the church, celebrated a requiem mass.

More than 100 firemen, headed by Mayor Nichols, Acting Fire Commissioner Thomas F. Sullivan and Chief Daniel F. Bennett, marched with the funeral cortege from the house at No. 38 Woodlawn street to the church. As the procession passed the firehouse on the way to the church, apparatus was moved into the street and bells tolled.

Fall bearers were all members of Engine Company No. 2. They were Edward Doyle, James McPadden, Michael O'Donnell, William Bell, Charles Flynn and Patrick Bell.

Burial was in Forest Hills cemetery.

Ruth Has Hit Ball 84 Miles on His Safe Hits

By NICK FLATLEY

BABE RUTH, King of Clout, has been running up some remarkable distance records while annihilating space with baseballs. The big boy, who hits them farther than any other man ever could, has knocked the onion some 81 miles on his big league base hits, and has traveled 221 miles on his expensive feet while making himself famous.

The Babe, at the time of writing, had-eggulged 1444 base hits since he broke in with the Red Sox back in 1915.

Of these, 726 were singles, 296 doubles, 87 triples and 335 home runs.

The average single travels at least 100 yards, the double at least 150, the triple at least 200, and the home run at least 250. Therefore in figure he has hit something like this with his clout:

726 singles (80 yards) 58,080 yards

296 doubles (150 yards) 44,400 yards

87 triples (200 yards) 17,400 yards

335 home runs (250 yards) 83,750 yards

Total distance 103,630 yards

And that many yards used to be in about 221 miles when we went to school.

These figures do not include the number of yards he has traveled when he has landed on the bases. The longest hit he ever made was a home run that traveled 250 yards. The longest hit he ever made was a home run

MEDBURY SAYS--

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of the year when thousands of people are going on excursions, and most of the trains and boats are so crowded that they make a sandline can look like the wide open spaces.

ONE woman said that compared to the boat she was on a telephone booth seemed like the Mechanic Building.

YOUR ticket entitles you to every thing, including fractured ribs and broken bones.

CORNS are present free of charge.

AND shoes are massaged gratis.

SOME people find these trips very useful because they can take a stand on their own feet.

ONE fellow traveled a hundred and fifty miles on another guy's foot.

HE rode seventy-five miles before he even changed positions.

THERE are always lots of ants on these excursion trains.

They're usually filled.

THERE was a wreck the other afternoon, and one man said it was the first time he'd been off his feet since early in the morning.

HE said he was anxious to get home so that he could sit down.

MOST of these excursion trains are so slow that the railroad companies use calendars instead of timetables.

THEY have one train in the South Creepers.

IF it went any slower, it'd be backing up.

IT'S a tricky trick. It starts by the seat.

LOTS of passengers walk ahead of it and then meet themselves at the station.

THEY get ahead in the morning and spend all day Sunday at the depot.

IT'S wonderful in this day and age to think that you can take a nice railroad journey without leaving the station.

DAILY SHORT STORY

TRAVELLERS' REST

By Mary Henke

THE GRAND HOTEL, Travellers' Rest, Thomas Burke, Proprietor, was the way it was advertised in the county papers. Mr. Burke, a big, ruddy man, was his own hall porter, bell boy, clerk, steward, and, in times of emergency, his own waiter. But he managed, in spite of his varied duties, to impart an atmosphere of cheer and hospitality and cheerfulness to the small brick hotel that made travelling men, meeting allies away, speak of it with appreciation and regret.

Parker Steele, for one, always spent his week-end there, having no place else to go. At twenty-seven Steele was find manager for his firm, having risen over the heads of men who had been there when he was born. To do this, he had to compensate grimly single-mindedness in his business. No time for girls or sports. Mr. Steele, who liked Steele, thought it rather a pity. He was a handsome lad, but he was getting a black-necked neck. It was didn't have your fun when you were young, you never got it.

It was one of Mr. Burke's theories that all decent men are susceptible to good cooking, flowers and babies. He always kept a bunch of flowers on the desk in the lobby and had seen more than one man's eyes brighten at the sight of them. This morning, with one extra eye on the negro who was strutting out, he arranged a great bouquet of lilacs that "butter, woman" had brought him from the country. He thought, as he regarded his work, "That young lady in Room 8 would appreciate some of these."

He had never had a young lady who was less than that one. Her name on the register was Miss F. Burke, Chicago. She had been there a week, and she hadn't even rung for her water. A pretty young lady, but rather plain. He looked one of the lilacs from the bouquet. "I'll take some up to her," he decided.

He knocked at the door of Room 8. There was a moment's silence, then the door swung open almost defiantly. A frozen look came into the young lady's blue eyes when she saw who it was. She stood there waiting.

"I brought you these," stammered Mr. Burke, disconcerted. "I thought you'd like them."

She stood there motionless, but in the frozen look in her eyes melted. She moved as if to reach for the flowers, away and fell. Mr. Burke, dismayed, carried her to the bed, clasped her hands and bethought her forehead. Presently the girl got up. She put her hand to her head.

"I'm sorry," she murmured, "sorry to have troubled you. I must have been weak."

A horrible suspicion had struck Mr. Burke as he rubbed her thin wrists.

"And why are you weak?" he demanded sternly.

Color flooded her pale face. "I guess—I don't know."

He looked down at her, his shoulders tell me—" he urged. "Perhaps I can help you."

The color rose again. "I haven't any money—to pay for my room."

The kindness in his eyes did not change. She gave him a swift look then concentrated on her hands again.

"I've been trying to sell books. Either there's not very good books, or I'm not a very good saleswoman. Nobody wants to buy them. I'm supposed to get a commission on what I sell—but I haven't sold any—"

"When did you last sleep?" demanded Mr. Burke bluntly.

"I don't remember," she evaded.

"Have you eaten since you've been here?" he persisted.

She stammered, embarrassed, "No, I haven't."

"I ate the last roll—yesterday."

Mr. Burke paced the room. "Good heavens, what kind of a health do you think I am—to insult me by starting under my roof?"

She dropped her head. "I'm sorry."

Two days later Miss Williams was installed behind the desk. "There's no charity about it," Mr. Burke sternly. "If you know how hard it was to get competent help, I'll be money thank."

Parker Steele, coming in, saw the new clerk and was so flustered that he had to come back, blushing to his ears, to ask for it. She gave it him, but Mr. Steele detected the glint of amusement and liking in her eyes.

"Thank do fine for each other," he told himself, and sat back wistfully.

But nothing happened. Young Steele came and went, immersed in business, and Miss Williams took hold willingly in her new job. She was no bookkeeper and never would be, but Mr. Steele never bothered about books anyway. He found it simpler to put the paid bills in one drawer and his unpaid bills in the other.

She was installed with Steele, but not falling in love more rapidly. "Or maybe he is and doesn't know it," he reflected, "I'll find out."

"I don't know what I'm going to do about my bookkeeper," he told the young man complaining. "One observation detected a rising flush in the other's cheek."

"She's plain discomforted," pursued Mr. Burke. "I guess I'll have to be out of a job. Let me explain to you in a simple way, if I show her can easily hold—"

Two evenings later Mr. Steele dropped into the writing room and very quickly stepped out again. He had caught, in that second's time, a kiss and a hugging repetition of "I don't take him long to slide home after the first show." He must, and sat down in the lobby to wait.

'CHANGES MIND
ON NUPTIAL EVE

After waiting a year and a half to get the consent of Miss Lohness, Ivonne Tessier, twenty-one, of No. 14 Green street, Cambridge, Joseph Ashmont Lohness, twenty-one, of No. 100 North street, and the bridegroom, settled for a plunge into matrimony. He waited at the last minute by his intended spouse, according to his promise, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. H. J. O'Brien, the young man returned his marriage license to the city clerk.

On a visit here from Nova Scotia, where he has been studying for the priesthood, and immediately became enamoured of her a year and a half ago, according to his mother, the romance reached its consummation when he came upon receiving her consent, he filed marriage intentions at the city clerk's office.

When asked about the license the young lady gave the "cool feet," according to the mother of Lohness, she said she must have been in church in the near future when she decided he had better return to Nova Scotia for two or three months.

MAKING UP SLEEP

Earl Beaulieu and Fred Jackson, of No. 45 Bakersfield street, can't sleep with trucks passing, so during daytime they take a nap out-of-doors to catch up. The city has been asked to stop the nuisance.

JOHN MAHONEY

TODAY

Rally for Devereaux

A ray of hope gleamed today for the family and friends working to save John J. Devereaux from the electric chair when the Veterans of Foreign Wars rallied to the aid of the condemned youth.

With the American Legion already active in behalf of Devereaux and his two pals, John J. McLaughlin and Edward J. Heinlein, all of whom are doomed to go to their death early next month for the Waltham car bomb murder, the aid of the second veterans' organization encouraged "the clemency committee."

State Adjutant James Gallagher of the V. F. W. declared that he will confer with State Commander Hornerman regarding presentation of the facts of Devereaux' mental illness to Governor Fuller.

Gallagher's action is based on discovery that Devereaux was subject to mental trouble even before he entered the service at the country mill recently he drew government compensation because of insanity due to mental condition, but the Veterans of Foreign Wars said that he had been suffering with the trouble before enlisting to fight.

Washington, July 3 (Universal.)—The House of Representatives passed today a bill to grant a pension to the late Mrs. Mary Ann Devereaux, widow of a Revolutionary War soldier.

the "Puck"-Vazquez-Jones bill, said Assistant Attorney General John A. McGaughlin, who directed the investigation. McGaughlin said the bill was "not a good idea" after a long examination of the government records.

On the floor, the bill grows fainter in the hearts of the doomed youths, as revealed in a letter written by one of them, a 19-year-old mother. "Forty nights left" is the theme of McGaughlin's second letter to the boys, but in the next four days alone, there are now but "thirty-six nights left."

FALL RIVER LINER HELD UP THREE HOURS BY FOG

New York, July 3 (A.P.)—Rather than risk accident in a dense fog for the first time in its history, the Fall River liner steamer Commodore, which was scheduled to leave for three and a half hours today for New York, was held up for three hours because of the delay rumors.

Because of the delay rumors, it was thought the steamer was in trouble, but when the fog lifted the Commodore

NO STOCK MARKETS IN SESSION UNTIL JULY 6

There will be no session of either the Boston or New York Stock ex-to combine the railroads—Erie, Nickel Plate, Chesapeake & Ohio, Hocking Valley and Pere Marquette—will probably go through.

Such combinations represent economy, if properly managed, and should be encouraged, especially if the people realize that changes until July 6, the market being closed today in extension of the July 4th holiday. Cotton exchanges were also closed.
